Loading-Cracked-Goodnight-Bots-VERSION-4.1.zip-x64; GN Bots.Q: Overlaying a default number format on a current number format? I have a model called Question with two fields, one for a number, and one for a text label. The question currently uses the FloatField formatter, and a formatter I wrote that outputs a div in the value with the question number. Right now, I want to turn that question number formatter into a text number formatter, but the only way I've been able to do this is by importing a new number formatter and overwriting the value of "text number formatter", like so:

from django.core.formatter.number import NumberFormatter
class
QuestionFormatter(NumberFormatter):
def number_from_python(self, value):
my_value = super(QuestionFormatter, self).number_from_python(value)
my_value = 'You entered the value {} in the float number
field'.format(my_value)
return
my_value
number_formatter =
QuestionFormatter

What I want to be able to do is to find out where the formatter of the current value in that model is, and replace the text number formatter with the new formatter. I'd be open to other ways of accomplishing the same result as well, although this will probably be easier to work with. In case it's relevant, I'm using the number template tag (link to docs). A: You're almost there. Just use the `value_from_datadict` method of the superclass of the number formatter to get the actual number, and pass that to the new formatter, with

f.string=f.number: from django.core.formatter.number import NumberFormatter class
QuestionFormatter(NumberFormatter):
def number_from_python(self, value):
