So I believe I have a working install. However, when I check it, which should be at the system fonts folder, it's not there. And the reason I believe it's not there is because I went to c:\windows\fonts in Windows and there is nothing there either. I thought I had the path to the fonts directory, but clearly I don't. Here's what the system fonts folder looks like altura-fuente-black-normal-occidental-descargar A: Go to: C:\Windows\Fonts and there you will find the fonts you just installed. To access them in the Windows Explorer, just drag them from the Fonts folder into the Windows Explorer. As you have chosen a non-standard name, they will not appear in the Computer right-click menu. The Empty Cup Every day, without fail, as soon as my cup is empty, another one appears before me. I should be excited, but instead I'm feeling like the glass is breaking. It's like the stucco ceiling in my childhood home. Every day, something cracks. It's just water dripping on the floor and it's hard to stop. But it keeps coming, falling in a steady stream to the tiles below. Water. It's everywhere. In my fridge, from the taps. I put soap in my mouth, but it's just another drop in my cup. I drink a bottle of water, but another drop falls. I drink a glass, but another drop falls. It's the ocean. It'll never end. My joy is like the drops falling on the desert floor. Each one traces a line, a path to the hole below. I sit on the edge of the bed and a cup drops down. My hands shake, but I drink it. Each swallow leads me to the bottom of my cup and the hollow that remains once I reach it. The cup hasn't been empty for a day. With a whack to the base, one falls. With a tap, it rains. I sit in front of the cabinet, but it just keeps spilling. The display case beside me glows. There's blood on the floor beneath my feet. It's the notepad beside the bed. I can't read the words without a cup in my hand. Water is streaked through the letters like a winding river. I pour, but the cup overflows. d0c515b9f4
