Creating Graphics with Adobe Photoshop Elements There are a few things that you need to have to start creating graphics with Photoshop Elements. Create a Document You have to start with a document. A document is a place where your ideas are saved before you create them. A document can be like a personal journal, a sketch book, or a folder that you can open and then close. You can use a document or you can use a Photoshop document. In the artboards and menus of Photoshop Elements, there is a New Document option. This will allow you to create a new document. To create a new document, click the artboard that you want your new document to be on and then click the New Document icon on the menus. Once you click on the New Document icon, you will be shown a user interface. You will see a Title bar at the top with the name of your new document. You will also see the new document open in the artboard. You can also copy a pre-existing document to create a new one. By copying a document, you can get to know a lot of the rules and features of Photoshop Elements and you can use the same shortcuts and features that Photoshop Elements does. You can copy one of your existing files to create a new one. This is possible because of an option called Save as. You can click on the Save As button on the Photoshop Elements interface. This will show you the Save as dialog box, as shown in the following figure. Save as Dialog Box A dialog box is a user interface that allows you to do certain things with the computer, including create new documents. In this dialog box, you will be asked to type the name of the new document. The next thing that you will be asked is where you want to save the new file. You can save the new file in the same location where the original document is saved. You will then be shown a bar that has all the options for saving. These options include the original filename, the location, the date, the image size 05a79cecff

To determine the frequency and clinical significance of deceptively normal ankles in swimmers, 23 consecutive male swimmers (age 17.7 +/- 1.8 years) with deceptively normal ankles underwent radiographic evaluation to identify the presence of a turf toe. Thirty-eight feet (49%) had significant calcifications in the talonavicular joint. None of the feet had cavus, ulceration or bursitis in the subtalar joint.
