Update: Southern District of NY Judge Furman denies request to release of information. However, other motion was granted. Reddit has long been criticized for its poor track record with "dark patterns": its failure to provide readily accessible information about the risks associated with subscribing to its services, as well as the nature of its terms of service. According to U.S. District Judge Alison Nathan, there's no safe place to share a Reddit post. While the government has no interest in requiring or encouraging Reddit to keep its users' private messages private, the message boards are an important tool for law enforcement. However, Nathan has ordered Reddit to disclose user posts that were made by its "self-censor" function. Nathan disagrees with Reddit's argument that the self-censor function should be considered part of Reddit, and thus should be protected by the Communications Decency Act of 1996 (47 USC 230). "Reddit is more than a site for free expression; it also acts as a forum for the online community to communicate and seek advice in a safe, secure and trustworthy environment," she writes. "While this safe space is a private forum that may not align with Reddit's commercial interests, such as traffic and advertising, the ultimate issue is whether an internet site, and in particular a website commonly described as 'the front page of the internet,' owes a duty of confidentiality to its users." That means that, after all, us lonely Redditor's posts, like any other posts, can be viewed by anyone who can find them. Nathan also notes that in some other cases Reddit has voluntarily turned over user information. For example, the website helped investigators with the Orlando nightclub shooting because it warned of a credible threat of violence. As the New York Times points out, Nathan "ruled that the government could ask Reddit to hand over an unidentified Reddit user's posts, even if that user used Reddit's self-censor function, because Reddit did not qualify as a provider of private forums." She wrote that Reddit operates as a "centralized online marketplace" in which the posts are "publicly available" or "posted to a publicly accessible website." Q: Problem while integrating Adwaita using cmake I am trying to build local Adwaita theme. I followed the instructions from here. In the example there is no library needed, only sources. That is what I am doing, but getting some problem. The code works as expected, but there are some warnings. The CMakeLists.txt file is just plain text, I am not sure about it.
