(N-[(2,6-Dimethyl-).Konrad Sinelnikoff Konrad Sinelnikoff is an American independent curator and producer. As a solo curator, he has completed work at Yale University, Regen Projects, Galerie Buchholz and Eckhaus Latta, among others. His work is included in numerous museum collections, including the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago, Whitney Museum of American Art, Hammer Museum, and the Los Angeles Museum of Contemporary Art. Early life and education Sinelnikoff is a graduate of the Columbia School of the Arts (BFA, 1988), and has continued his studies at Stanford University School of Medicine. Work Sinelnikoff's work explores social, political and cultural implications of the unseen corners of popular culture, popular music and mass consumption. He has worked with artists such as Jason Rhoades, Robyn Hitchcock, Ndid Okereke, Edward Keller, Jack Mackie, and Sarah Jones. He has also worked with archival photography, periodicals and writing. Some of his recent work includes showing photographs of the American Desert across the multiple mediums of film, light, performance, sculpture, and installation at the Pérez Art Museum Miami, as well as works at the Academy of Music, Photography and Motion at the University of Kentucky, Gallery Eulenspiegel in New York, and Lisson Gallery in London. Sinelnikoff has curated exhibitions in institutions such as the Whitney Museum of American Art, The Hammer Museum, SFMOMA, Glasgow Museums, Kunsthalle Zürich, Tate Modern, Tate Britain, and Tate Modern. He is the Director of the American Center in Amsterdam, a project he founded in 2014. Sinelnikoff currently splits his time between Chicago and Amsterdam, where he lives.
