Good, you're in luck, because you can now use it as a game controller. You know, in case you ever wanted to play certain games on your iPhone and were always too lazy to pick up an actual controller. You'll need to sign up for a $9.99/month At-Home game suite called SnapZapp for it to work though. There's no manual or instructions for setting this up, but you can just take your iPhone to GameStop or some other store to set it up there.[Defending actions on the Internet and intelligent software tools: European society on the defense of citizens' data]. The Internet is a communication tool provided to citizens, society and other actors with access to it. Internet-based technologies provide many advantages: transparency and equality, free access to information, social networks and many other services. However, the protection of citizens' personal data used for their communication on the Internet is by no means guaranteed. The European Digital Rights (EDRI) database contains thousands of complaints made by citizens against Internet companies in Europe who have, in the past ten years, failed to respect the safety of citizens' personal data. EDRI's defense of citizens' rights can be considered as coherent with the principles of the European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights. In this paper we share with the Italian members of EDRI (Associazione Italiana di Diritti Digitali) a small example of an Italian software product (Galileo Software), designed to enable the communication between internet users and social media. The purpose of this is to facilitate the connection between EDRI's defense of citizens' right and the intelligent software tools developed by the world's pioneers in the field of cybernetics.A vehicle is a thing that needs not only to be safe but to be safe for the driver too. It has to fit all the necessary requirements and offers just that. It needs to be engineered in a way so that it prevents the driver from hurting himself, the other people or
