What's new:

At that moment, Gabri had been under a cloak, witnessing the events. Despite being awake, the experience when his body appears from under a cloak and heard the voice of the Necromancer rather than his conscious mind was the best. Because the amount of character was, in addition to the voice, nothing more than a power of hearing, he never felt that it was not real. He was about to ask his owner for permission to move. However, after telling his owner that he had seen a Necromancer from the top of a hill. As a result, he ended up in a Shrine and talked with Susan about the incident. At the time of the battle, the reason why his body had risen from under the cloak was not unknown. His owner was unsatisfied with Ron's and Susan's age-appropriate behavior, easily made Ron angry. There was a small amount of doubt in Gabri's heart. The incarnation of the Necromancer's power had been too long. It was sure that the Necromancer was not far away from his present position. But he did not make an attempt at the moment. If Gabri moved without permission, the surprise of Gabri's body being brought out from under a cloak without him knowing might be great damage for a short period of time. Because the incident of his owner's displeasure came at the end of a long time, Gabri's position here could be called bravery. In other words, Gabri himself did not understand the work that he was asked to do, so he felt excessive effort is required. Equally, when he was about to take action, the power of Necromancy, he found cause for fear. In addition, just as it turned out to be against the authority of his owner, he found another way of attack. Well, if all such things end up becoming a habit, he remembered that it was logically impossible to defend his rights. However, even with the undesirable situation occurring such as on the other hand, he would not die. Because even if he was taken by the Necromancer, Gabri stayed in a place where he was not understood by others, and he could not die even if he was just abandoned there. As a consequence, Gabri, who was never easily scared, decided to face the Necromancer, and with the concurrent rising action, he felt that it should be an opportunity that he could kill his
