* Adobe Photoshop Elements : Adobe Photoshop Elements can be used by beginners to create simple images and edit images created by others. It's easy to use and supports the same vector-based editing as Photoshop but is limited to creating only 8-bit images. Most of its tutorials are available from the website for tml`). * Adobe Photoshop Lightroom : Adobe Photoshop Lightroom is similar to Elements in that it is a professional editing program with many tools for manipulating both RAW and JPEG images. (See the later "Lightroom" sidebar for more about Lightroom.)

It works best with RAW (Digital Negative or DNG) files and has dozens of editing tools. Lightroom can import images from other programs such as Elements.

* Adobe Photoshop Express : Adobe Photoshop Express can be used to create and edit simple images without a full-featured version of Photoshop, as well as to open images from other programs. The program works with JPEG, RAW, and PNG images. *

Aperture : Aperture is a professional program from Apple that has many of the same features as Photoshop but has fewer options and no easy way to import images from other programs. Although it isn't the most popular app for photo editing, it's the default program used for both Apple and Mac computers. It works with JPEG, RAW, and TIFF images. *

_PhotoSherpa_ : _PhotoSherpa_ is a free Adobe-compatible editing software program (see the "Editors and Editions" sidebar) that's really meant as a tool for professionals. You can use it to edit and convert RAW images but have no access to the raw editing tools.

Q: How to simulate a bool with an enum in C# for API file? I have enum: public enum ResultA { Success = true, Failure = false, OutOfMemory = -1 } And I have interface: public interface IResultProcessor { ResultA Execute(); } What I want to do is to return a false for the OUTOFMEMORY value of the enum, but I cannot figure out how to return a boolean there.

[WebMethod(Description = "")]
```

```
[ScriptMethod(ResponseFormat =
```

```
ResponseFormat.Json)] public ResultA Execute() {
```

```
//if(enum.Success) return enum.Success;
```

```
//OUTOFMEMORY = -1 and I get compile error
```

```
return OUTOFMEMORY; //return false return
```

```
enum.Success; //return true } I need to get it using
```

```
simple if-else statement or something like that. A: I'd personally just use an out parameter for the enum so you can assign a value to it in your execute function.

```
public enum ResultA { Success = true, Failure = false, OutOfMemory = -1 } public interface IResultProcessor { ResultA Execute(out bool success); }
```

A: Why are you returning the Success and Failure values at all? I think you should have an Execute(ResultA success) and Execute(ResultA failure) method. You can try this (after all, enums aren't really numeric...):

```
[WebMethod(Description = "")] [ScriptMethod(ResponseFormat = ResponseFormat.Json)] public ResultA Execute(ResultA result) { return result; }
```
