WYSIWYG Web Builder 14.4.0 With All Extensions ((NEW))

GitLab 14.3 is the final release of WYSIWYG Web Builder. This version of WYSIWYG Web Builder features improved performance and stability. Its also included over 150 useful improvements in the code and UI, below we highlight a few major new features and improvements weve made to the WYSIWYG Web Builder tool since the release of GitLab 13.3 in March. The initial release of WYSIWYG Web Builder 14.0.0 with all extensions is currently in beta and will be updated to a final release once its ready. This version features the following key changes and improvements: We are now able to identify overlapping annotations in multiple files at the same time. Weve removed this limitation in WYSIWYG Web Builder and code completion is no longer available. See this issue for a detailed list of changes. The .git file under the root of a project has changed its content type from blob to tree in GitLab 13.12. The git workflow is designed to work best with blob content and so there is the need to convert these files when switching from blob to tree. This change has only affected blob content files and the conversion is done on the server. If you are using git on your local machine, you will not see any changes. With GitLab 13.12, in addition to the changes mentioned above, we also simplified the workflow for merging branches. If a branch is merged, only the conflicted files will be reviewed. This change has only affected branches that are merged from the root of a project. Any branches you create from the top of a project will continue to follow the workflow as before.
